

Honeywell parent company

Honeywell parent company

The Consolidated Temperature Controlling Co. acquired Butz's patents and business, and by 1893, had renamed itself Electric Heat Regulator Co. In 1898, the company was purchased by W. R. Sweatt, who, by 1916, named the company Minneapolis Heat Regulator Company, expanded its product line and patented the first electric motor approved by Underwriters Laboratories.

The first--and flagship--product offering, Quantum Origin launched in December 2021. It provides the world's only quantum-hardened encryption keys to protect data from advanced threats for cutting edge cybersecurity.

Used in virtually every commercial and defense aircraft platform worldwide, our aerospace products will continue to lead the future of air travel, including developments in advanced air mobility and the electrification of aircraft.

More than 10 million commercial buildings use our technologies to boost performance and create spaces that are more comfortable, safer and healthier for the people who use them.

Across dozens of industries, our solutions are driving energy transition and decarbonization to help organizations meet their commitments to regulators, stakeholders and the planet.

Our technologies are on the job every day in factories, refineries and other industrial settings where operators count on our products, systems and software to manage complex processes and deliver consistent results.

Learn how we're delivering impactful solutions across industries and developing cutting-edge technologies for automation, the future of aviation and energy transition.

Honeywell has 75 subsidiaries, of which 70 are 100% owned by the company. Included are Elster, Grimes Aerospace Company, Intelligrated Systems, Maxon Corporation, and Novar Systems.

AlliedSignal acquired Honeywell in 1999. Soon after the acquisition, AlliedSignal adopted Honeywell's name to preserve the brand's image and reputation.

In 2021, Honeywell was honored as one of the most innovative companies by Fast Company. The company is ranked 105 on the Fortune 500 list and 417 on Fortune's Global 500 list, indicating it is a top company in its industry.

Honeywell parent company

Contact us for free full report

Web: <https://hollanddutchtours.nl/contact-us/>

Email: energystorage2000@gmail.com

WhatsApp: 8613816583346

