

Specific companies and products kazakhstan

This list includes notable companies with primary headquarters located in the country. The industry and sector follow the Industry Classification Benchmark taxonomy. Organizations which have ceased operations are included and noted as defunct.

The latest available country-specific data shows that 83.2% of products exported from Kazakhstan was bought by importers in: Italy (18.8% of the Kazakhstani total), mainland China (18.7%), Russia (12.4%), Netherlands (5.2%), Türkiye (5%), South Korea (4.8%), Uzbekistan (4%), France (3.7%), Romania (3.5%), Greece (2.8%), Singapore (2.2%) and ...

According to KPMG's report on the Impact of COVID-19 on Key Economic Sectors in Kazakhstan, among the most pressing needs are: use of e-platforms to deliver key public services (including remote education to rural areas); online trade solutions; cargo transportation; development of digital products in the financial sector; IT solutions to ...

In 2019, Kazakhstan major trading partner countries for exports were Italy, China, Russian Federation, Netherlands and France and for imports they were Russian Federation, China, Korea, Rep., Italy and Germany.

According to Forbes Global 2000 rankings, the following companies are examples of leading Kazakhstani companies. Bank (Regional bank) Halyk Bank (Regional bank) KazMunaiGas Exploration (Oil and gas operations) Wikipedia also lists exporters from Kazakhstan. Selected examples are shown below:

Kazakhstan was the last of the Soviet republics to declare independence following the dissolution of the Soviet Union in 1991. The current President, Nursultan Nazarbayev, has been leader of the country since then, and is characterised as authoritarian, with a government history of human rights abuses and suppression of political opposition.[4] Kazakhstan has worked to develop its economy, especially its dominant hydrocarbon industry.[4]

Following the unrest, President Tokayev promised a new democratic order, organizing the first referendum in 27 years, to approve constitutional changes aimed at limiting presidential powers in favor of the parliament and implementing significant decentralization. Another important development was Tokayev's push for the repatriation of offshore illegally acquired assets and redemption of about $473 million back into the country.

The next phase of reforms will have to confront some of Kazakhstan's systemic and structural economic challenges to achieve currency stability, manage inflation, reduce income inequality and state's involvement in the economy along with greater diversification, privatization, digital and green transitions.

Civil society is watching closely the issue of whether the rhetoric will continue to live up to reality as President Tokayev proceeds to convey his preoccupation with improving the living standards, eliminating income gaps, and creating jobs and decent labor conditions.

Kazakhstan is striving to extricate itself from the shadow of Russia's war on Ukraine and ensure financial and economic stability. The reinvasion of Ukraine by Russia, and subsequent Western sanctions levied against Russia and Belarus, are having significant repercussions in Kazakhstan, a member of the Eurasian Economic Union (EAEU) with a long border and extensive trade and economic relations with Russia.

Nevertheless, Kazakhstan, a state historically under Russian influence, now pursues a complex balancing multi-vector foreign policy to diversify its economic corridors. This involves seeking support from the U.S. and the EU to contribute to strengthening Kazakhstan's economic position and national independence in a region stuck between a revanchist Russia and an assertive China.

Kazakhstan's president Kassym-Jomart Tokayev told Russian President Vladimir Putin during a public panel at the St. Petersburg International Economic Forum that his country would not recognize the "quasi-states" of the Donetsk and Luhansk "peoples" republics" in eastern Ukraine. Kazakhstan will not help Russia evade sanctions, emphasizing its obligation to the international community.

Contact us for free full report

Web: <https://hollanddutchtours.nl/contact-us/>

Email: energystorage2000@gmail.com

WhatsApp: 8613816583346

